

Lost's Bond

I was happy and satisfied with my life. There was no problem at all, except that my friend Tarpan, oh sorry, my best friend more than a brother changed his behavior towards me and all this happened in the interval of two years. And the most important thing was that there was no particular reason behind this type of behavior I was shocked and depressed at the same time by knowing this, and tried to figure it out.

When we used to study in same school we both were decent in study, neither like a topper nor like a failure. Oh again so sorry, let me take you to the first day of our school life when I met Tarpan for the first time. I was very happy and excited about the new class, new session, and new friends and also I was very nervous at the same time as I was the one who was going to repeat the same class because I failed last year and this class was nothing new for me. But I thought that I am getting another chance and definitely I will not leave this opportunity at all.

When I reached the school, I entered in the class with head down as I was failure there. I saw a vacant place in the side bench in the corner and just after that a new bench starts where I met Tarpan for the first time, his reaction was pity normal with me as I thought that either he doesn't know that I am failure or he doesn't care about all this. And that bench and particularly that corner seat became my favorite and permanent seat. I and Tarpan used to talk to each other in the matter of study, as I started giving attention to the study more than anything. Not only about studies we used to talk about new places, crickets, adventure etc. In short I started discovering the inner me. As, I doesn't had the interest in all this before I met Tarpan, he taught me about various new things and completely changed me. I became the one who had developed the interest in the study as well as in discovering new things and in many, many more places. I started going his home and spending most of the time with him and vice versa.

It was the end of the session of the class IIB the examination date get announced and we all were well prepared for the exam especially I. Who worked hard all the day and night just to pass the exam and to insure that this time the same result doesn't get repeat as previous year. Exam happened, Result got out guess what, I topped the exam and secured the first rank and this was unbelievable for me as I worked so hard just to pass the exam as I doesn't want to repeat the same mistake again.

But, but, there was a boy who was sure that I will definitely do something extraordinary as he saw me that I worked so hard given my days and nights just to secure passing marks and the boy was none other than Tarpan. Tarpan, who also secured good rank under top 5.

And from then we became the best friend, never looked back in anything. Years passed but our bonding got much more stronger than before we used to eat lunch together, laughed together, roasted people together, naming the teacher with funny names together, get punished together, played together and experienced everything together which was possible in school life till class VII and this period from class 2nd to 7th was the golden period of our whole life now we were not a best friend any more we became brother.

But, this doesn't last longer much, he left the school. But, this doesn't stopped as from meeting daily in the terrace of his home or mine. We regularly started meeting in the terrace or in the ground which was our regular playing ground, we used to discuss everything about his new school, new environment, new friends, about studies and the matters of our life which can change our future. Unnecessarily, we used to talk upon anything like, why we are living? , what's the purpose of all these? , why we are even studying? , Is all this things necessary to survive in this world? , what will happen if the sun stopped rising? , Is there any other universe in the Milky Way galaxy? , how we will live if we grow up? and many, many more questions like. And in this way, days passed, months passed, years passed, somehow we passed our board examination with securing good marks and we had lot of things which we will do together in future.

Since then suddenly all these things changed and started fading up. We stopped meeting with each other. There were no reason behind all this incident but, still we get separated from each other and then he get surrounded with some of his new friends, new environment, developed new habits, and now we are nothing more than a stranger. We had nothing to talk about suddenly all the bonds got disappeared and the darkest phase of my life started.
